Manager's Comments

Amidst notable correction experienced by global & regional markets during March, Boubyan Local & GCC Equity Fund was down by -1.63% for the period from February 28th to March 31st, while return came at +0.41% YTD. And since its inception has accumulated a total return of +33.76%.

Globally, markets went through a sharp decline during March, predominantly driven by aggressive U.S. tariff implementations, leading to fears of global economic slowdown from escalating trade war. Accordingly, the MSCI World Index corrected sharply by almost -5%.

Regionally, outperforming their global counterparts by a hefty margin, GCC markets went through mild correction, thanks to higher oil prices, which gained around +2% in March, as well as positive sentiment surrounding earnings season. As a result, the S&P GCC Shariah Index ended the period down by less than -1%.

Although we still maintain a degree of caution as we foresee some fluctuations to persist over the short to medium term. Primarily driven by geopolitical tensions, and the anticipated economic repercussions of the monetary tightening policy that central banks around the world adopted over the past three years, by raising interest rates to curb inflation. Which might cast a shadow over the real economy's performance over the medium term, as has been the case with the banking sector in the United States and Europe last year. However, we are optimistic about the region's economies over the medium to long term, as we believe they can withstand relatively higher inflation, being predominantly commodity-based economies. Therefore, we believe that the regional governments, thanks to their financial reserves, can navigate through this phase by maintaining high spending rates to support economic activity, continuing to diversify their economies, and supporting the private sector, which in turn, will continue to provide alternatives for sustainable growth. This is likely to assist operationally and financially robust companies in continuing to generate strong performance and provide value for investors in the long term.
